Daiki Dining Outdoor

Marcio Kogan / Studio Mk27 Design

DESCRIPTION

The Daiki seats, born out of the Brazilian architect's passion for Japanese culture, go outdoors, where the open-air space is conceived and experienced as an extension of the indoor living area: a veritable tribute to Japanese design culture.

The Daiki family includes armchairs with a deep seat, available both with and without arms, a dining little armchair and a footstool.

Created using sophisticated wood crafting techniques, the curved shell in teak comprises two elements joined at a 45° angle, with a sloping backrest that guarantees maximum comfort. In the outdoor version the shell offers a snug fit for the stitched cushions and is set on a stainless-steel frame with Bronze-coloured varnished polished legs.

A design that also explores and reinterprets the American Mid-Century atmospheres, injecting new life into the style of contemporary outdoor furnishing with its clean, bold lines, exquisite teak working technique and balanced proportions.
